The opera is peculiar in many respecies, and as rendered last night was probably one of the most unique, and at the same time enjoyable performances ever witnessed on the Memphis stage. In the first place, there is no star part, strictly speaking, all the characters having a chance to display whatever talent they possess, Then, too, there is a departure from all the time-worn conventionalities the stereotyped situations, the familian scenes, and the result is—something en-tirelo new, something original. The plot of the Mikado is, in brief, as follows: The Mikado, as ruler of Japan, whose slightest behest is law, which must be obeyed issues a solemn decree-That all who firted, leered or winked, (Unless conoubiasis linked), Should forthwith be beheaded. Receiver Henry Fink, of the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georg a system, has purchased 4 00 tons of stell rail, with which to telay the track of the Macon and Brunswick division of that system. The rail has already strived, and the work of replacing the old iron rail will be commenced this week. Receiver Fink hopes to have the work completed in two months. The track will then be in as fine a condition as that of any road in the South. It is understood that when the steel rail is put down the East Tennessee people will shorten the time of their first people will shorten the time of their fast ed States Congress.

FROM THE PEOPLE. Mr. Steel's hermon. ors of the Appeal The Rev. Mr. Steel has, I think, been press of the city for his bold stand fo ourity. I beg to express my approval and ndorsement, and deeply regret that the reverend gent eman did not pursue the subject more thoroughly. Many prominent writ-ers, such as Buckle, Draper, Spencer, Huxley and Lecky, have held to the absurd theory that literature, art, science and the drama have been important factors of civilization, and Draper effirms that the introduction of artificial light, without which dancing would not obtain, was one of the primary conditions of civilization.
But these theories, though plausible, will not do. True religion has sought in the past—and I hope will continue in the ture-to eliminate the novel from literature, the passion from poetry, the nude studies from art, and to suppress entirely the drama and science when it has audaciously opposed revelation, and, indeed, by its own peculiar arguments, has compelled many scientists to abandon and retract their theories, or be burnt at out all promisezous social intercourse be tween the youth of opposite sexes might lead to immoral results and should be prohibited. Let each sex flock to itself in their amusements, and when gathered together in church for public worship let the males be on one side, the females on the other as in older and better days was indeed the style. In literature let all works of fiction be destroyed and no more written, and reading be confined strictly to the time—history and travel—and be our they are true. In poetry let nothing but hymns and anthems be recognized. painting let the artist confine himself ally suppressed. The study of the scien-tists should not be pursued further than that contained in the first chapter of Genesis. That God made the world and the heavens and all therein is enough for man to know. To seek further may lead one astray. Finally, I come to the nude in sculpture, which Mr. Steel very properly condemns, and calls attention to the fact that before the sculptor stood the nude model. In my humble endeavors to raise the present standard of purity it has often occurred to me, and doubtless to other high-minded men, either that the present form of man was given him at the original fall, or that nature made a terrible and fatal mistake in endowing man (male and fem le) with lower limbs at all—good for nothing but as a means of locomotion and for wicked artists to model and carve to degrade still more an utterly deprayed race. The mind is the man and the brain is the medium of the mind, therefore why should man be compelled to lead a groveling existence below the arm pits? And now for the remedy. There has of late been a man velous advance in surgical arts, perchance led on inscrutably to perfect the end I now propose. Let the College of Surgeons and the French Academy (who have achieved wondrous feats) turn their undivided attention to the possibility of amputating man at the neck. It would be unnecessary to extend the operation probably beyond one generation bers are not perpetuated but become ex-tinct as the foreleg of the whale, the fifth leg of the horse, the eye of the cave fish and the tail of prehistoric man—the grosser part of man would in succeeding exist only in rudimentary form and only ency to improve the morals of man as he now is, but not until the last is accomplished will man possess the pristine purity and sublimated intellectuality Mr. Steele and I so ardently desire. Not till then will man flusily triumph over his arch enemy, the devil! THE WAGE WORKERS.
